A: You should be using ImageMagick's convert utility (available here). In a command line window: convert_out.png

"D:\output\output_with_no_background.png" -draw "fill blue" -fill white -fill red -draw "fill black" -fill black This should produce the output you need. A: I'm assuming that you want the result to be zero transparent. If so, use $ convert image.jpg -channel RG -fill white -color yellow -compose over -compose multiply -composite output.png The problem is that the coloring modes may leave a yellow background behind on a color based image. I chose to use over because it's more general, and is faster than the black, gray and white methods. Do not use -compose screen, as there is no transparency in screenspace. Introduction According to 2013 figures there are around 3.5 million people incarcerated in the UK. The vast majority are convicted of non-violent offences. In a perfect world, prison time would be reserved for the most violent and heinous crimes. Catch 22 – A prison officer tells an inmate: “A sizeable proportion of prisoners who reoffend do so while on parole; you’ll be incarcerated in HM Prison Queen Elizabeth 3da54e8ca3
